Forgotten Books, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Phenomena Resulting From Interruption of Afferent and Efferent Tracts of the Cerebellum A single longitudinal incision was made in the middle line at the back Of the head and neck, and the muscles cut and scraped away from their attachments to the occipital bone and upper cervical Spines. The muscles were divided and scraped away as equally as possible on the two sides, so as to exclude the possibility Of any rotation or twisting Of the head in some direction being due to the action Of muscles having their attachments intact on one side, while the corresponding muscles Of the opposite side had been separated from their attachments. Bone forceps were alone used to effect an Opening into the cranial cavity and neural canal, and after Opening the theca the posterior part Of the cerebellum was carefully separated from the medulla Oblongata and raised to the extent necessary for the performance Of the section Of the inferior peduncle Of the cerebellum as it enters the organ, or for the division Of the posterior columns and their nuclei, and the tracts which occupy the lateral region Of the medulla, or to perform partial hemisection Of the medulla. In those instances in which a. Section Of the lateral region Of the medulla was made it was further necessary to make gentle traction on the medulla so as to displace it slightly to the opposite side in order to allow of the possibility Of accurately delimiting the extent Of the lesion. The actual section of any part was made by means Of a narrow-bladed delicate knife. When it was necessary to expose the cerebral cortex an Opening was effected into the cranial...
