

Business Process Automation - Performance and Capacity Planning with BPEL

By Matthias Maurer

VDM Verlag Dr. Mueller e.K. Paperback. Condition: New. 196 pages. Dimensions: 9.5in. x 6.7in. x 0.3in. The Performance and Capacity Planning Method for BPEL4WS-based Business Process Automation refers to the ability to predict resource consumption of a defined set of business processes automatically executed on an IT server system. A prediction model integrates all factors that influence a resource consumption prediction into a single tool. On the basis of a prediction model an accurate hardware configuration can be proposed which is able to run the defined set of business processes with the required throughput. This book gives a complete overview of how to develop, verify, and apply a performance and capacity planning method for BPEL-based processes in general. In particular, the performance and capacity planning method is established for BPEL-based business processes on IBM WebSphere software. This includes the WebSphere Process Choreographer Version 5.1 workflow engine of the WebSphere Business Integration Server Foundation Version 5.1, WebSphere Application Server Version 5.1, WebSphere MQ Version 5.3 and the DB2 Universal Database Version 8.1. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg, OR, La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
