These lesser heights, whose waving lines Such beauty to the landscape give, Tell of the old Triassic times, And to my tale their witness give. The voice which called me from the deep These trappean mountains all did hear, And rose with me from natures sleep, And stand, as I stand, proudly here. And now for long telluric years, I ve stood a sentry o er the land, And watched with varying hopes and fears, The changes of Time s mighty hand. I saw the glacier in his might Sweep from the north, a frozen sea, Ice piled on ice to mountain height, Moving, methought, resistlessly. I felt his cruel Ice-bound teeth Plough in my flanks, as on his way He ground and crushed my rocks beneath: I show the furrows to this day. I ve seen the new-formed earth press back The waters of the reflux sea, And wide diffused along its track The germs of floras yet to be. I ve seen the living germs far borne By wind and wave from other lands, Grasses and grains, and trees uptorn, Find lodgement in the new-made sands. And as these sands have richer grown, And turned to mould from year to year, From seeds by wind and water sown The flowerets and the plants appear. I saw the primal forests rise, And slowly grow from year to year, Until their branches swept the skies, And veiled the landscape far and...
