Findings This section makes a series of findings regarding the scientific consensus on the threat posed by global warming, the impacts that have already been observed, the harm global warming poses to individuals, the need for widespread and cumulatively substantial greenhouse gas emissions reductions to protect against dangerous climate change, the role of the U. S. government in addressing this problem, and the opportunities to reduce emissions while saving taxpayers money and enhancing national security through improved management of U. S. government operations. TITLE I FEDERAL GOVERNMENT INVENTORY AND MANAGEMENT OF - GREENHOUSE GAS EMISSIONS Sec. 101. Inventory of federal government greenhouse gas emissions Section 101 (a) requires each federal agency to inventory and re-port its greenhouse gas emissions annually, in accordance with guidance issued by EPA. Emissions include indirect emissions from generation of electricity used by the agency and commercial air travel by agency personnel, as well as emissions associated with government work that has been outsourced to private contractors. Section 101 (b) directs EPA to, within 3 months of enactment, issue guidance for agencies for conducting inventories. The guidance must sets procedures at least as rigorous as the inventory procedures established under EPAs Climate Leaders program, a voluntary program for industry greenhouse gas reductions. Under section 101 (c), agencies initial inventories are due one year after enactment, and must be certified by EPA as technically valid. If EPA declines to certify an agency inventory, the agency must revise the inventory within 6 months. Inventories must be publicly reported on agencies Web...
