Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Fourfold Difficulty of Anglicanism: Or the Church of England Tested by the Nicene Creed; In a Series of Letters You cannot define your doubts, for, in truth, they are hardly of a specific character; you can only say generally, that your confidence in your religious position is shaken, that each new secession startles you afresh, and that you are therefore anxious to learn, in each instance, what has led to the step taken, that so you may judge for yourself whether new questions have been suggested, or old ones put in a new light by these modern schismatics. You add, that with this view, you have looked into most of their publications; but you complain of Mr. Marshall s Twenty-two Reasons, as exhibiting conclusions only, silently passing over the whole process by which they were attained: on the other hand, you think Mr. Newman s Essay too long and difficult, not handy enough for general use, but requiring an extensive knowledge of Ecclesiastical history for its just appreciation: Mr. Oakeley s short Letter was rather a personal apology for himself than an exposition of principles for the guidance of others: and Mr. Faber s arguments are directed against a position with which you never sympathized, and which indeed you could never reconcile with any known rules either of logic, ethics, or theology. In a word, nothing that you have hitherto met with from the pen of any of the converts, has come home to you, as of practical service to yourself, or likely to help those many others who are in similar circumstances.
