Nist Technical Note 1798: Towards a New Approach for Evaluating Fire Blocking Barrier Fabrics (Paperback)

By U S Department of Commerce

Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The objective of this study was to provide guidelines to quantify heat transfer characteristics of fire blocking barrier fabrics (BF) used in soft furnishings. Fundamental BF properties that influence the heat transfer characteristics as it relates to thermal protection of cushioning components in upholstered products are discussed. This is important to enable a priori selection of BFs such that a final upholstered product complies with full-scale, open-flame flammability regulations. The report provides a brief review of existing test methods which generally use char length and/or mass loss as pass/fail criteria for assessing performance of BFs to be used in finished products. Generally, in these test methods, BFs are tested in mock-up configuration as opposed to individual components as considered in this study.

Reviews

This publication will not be easy to get going on reading but really exciting to read through. it was writtem really perfectly and beneficial. I found out this pdf from my i and dad suggested this publication to find out.
