Heavier chains and shackles doth the world lay on us, which do fetter and entangle our very souls. Far worse ordure and stench doth the world breathe out, I mean ribaldry, carnality, and all kind of brutish behaviour. Finally, more prisoners and guilty persons hath the world, not to be judged by the umpireship of any earthly magistrate, bat by the censure and verdict of Almighty God. Happy therefore are you, if you can reckon yourselves translated out of prison, into a place of preservation, which if it be cumbered with darkness, yourselves are lamps to light it: If it charge you with gyves, yet are you loose and unbound towards God: If you be pestered with unsavoury smell, you are frankincense and savour of sweetness: If it affright you with expectation of judges, yourselves Hereafter shall judge nations, and rule over people (d). With this saying of Tertullian, doth St. Cyprian agree. O blessed prison, saitli he, which your presence bath honoured! O blessed prison that sendeth the men of God to heaven! O darkness, brighter than the sun itself, and more clear than the light of this world (c), where the temples of God are now placed, and your members sanctified with your divine confessions of your faith! Let them complain of the difficulties of the prison, that have fastened their affection upon worldly vanities. A Christian Catholic, even out of prison, hath renounced tin-world in his baptism, and it...
