Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: LAP Lambert Academic Publishing | In the communications literature exist many documents that explain how to use spatial diversity to improve the performance of the system. However, the use of spatial diversity has not been studied in depth for GNSS, although in the last years the subject has received some interest. Lately, numerous applications of GNSS for urban indoor applications has emerged. One of the main sources of impairment in urban and indoor environments is multipath propagation. Spatial diversity is an effective means to resolve the impact of multipath. Therefore, this manuscript addresses the problem of the Time Of Arrival Estimation in DSSS based navigation systems in Non Line Of Sight (NLOSS) environments using antenna array signal processing methods to mitigate the multipath and improve the quality of the signal. The proposed methods are the synchronization of the frequency and delay parameters using the Maximum Likelihood Estimator (MLE), and the use of a Minimum Mean Square Error (MMSE) spatial filtering or beamforming to remove the multipath from the input signal for a correct estimation of the frequency shift and the code delay. | Format: Paperback | Language/Sprache: english | 68 pp.
