Predictions of downstream hydrographs for larger discharges, such as the controlled flood in March - April 1996, which reached a maximum release of cubic meters per second, have been based on extrapolations of that hydraulic geometry. Data from the controlled flood have been used to extend the model to higher discharges using a method that differs from that used to determine hydraulic geometry in the original model. Scaling of the momentum equation shows that the wave is well represented by the kinematic-wave equation on the receding limb of the controlled-flood hydrograph. The wave speed as a function of discharge can be determined from data obtained at streamflow-gaging stations. The wave speed, which is equal to k/da , where Q_k is the steady-flow discharge and...
