Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Regional Planning, Vol. 12: Arkansas Valley; June 1943 Within the Arkansas Valley are abundant resources: minerals, fuels, timber, agricultural products and manpower. At an early date, the readily available agricultural land was fully used and now the pressure of this resource limits the majority of farm families to the earnings from quite inadequate small farms. Industries did not afford sufficient alternate employment opportunities. The low income of the farming group is shared with the nonfarm group serving them, so that the purchasing power of all groups, is low. The unfilled needs of these people are tremendous and a great market for consumer goods, houses, furniture, clothing, etc., will come with the full efficient employment of the people. The future opportunities for work are found in part in the proposed development of industry in the Valley. The abundant natural resources, the undeveloped power possibilities, the labor supply and the potential market are considered in planning for a great expansion in basic manufacturing industry and in service industries. The great need to protect the soil from erosion, to reforest land not suited for continued production of crops, to control floods, and to develop recreational facilities offer further assurance of necessary employment. All educational forces would be enlisted to assist the people of the Valley in making the best use of the resources of the area. The report is confined to proposals of needed measures for full use of resources and does not concern itself with the choice of particular agencies or means for their accomplishment. The plan presented is designed ultimately to effect a combination of labor, land resources, capital, and power, which will give the people of the region full...
