Excerpt from Speeches on the Second Reading of the Church Patronage (Scotland) Bill in the House of Lords, June 2, 1874: And Earl of Camperdown s Amendment, June 9, 1874, Placing the Election of Ministers in the Hands of Ratepayers Church, avoid as long as you can coming to Parliament at all. . Why did I give this advice? Because, my Lords, I have long been of opinion that on all questions affecting the relations between Church and State the Condition of the public mind and of the mind of Parliament is simply chaos. I think the Most Rev. Prelate (the Archbishop of Canterbury) is now having 30mg experience as to the confused state of the public mind on all questions relating to Church Establishments. It would be very difficult, indeed, to say what is the prevailing sentiment. Bishops without authority - congregations without discipline Churches without government - religion without theological belief - these appear to be the devoutest aspirations of public writers, and of not a few public men. and so now in the same spirit I hear of propositions being thrust upon the Established Church of Scotland from without which would be fatal to her. I hear of proposals that her ministers Should be elected, not by those who adhere to her, but by those who are her avowed enemies. It was not without reason, therefore, that I was afraid that if the Established. Church of Scotland came to Parliament she would not get what she really wanted, but Would have thrust upon her some measure, in the name of reform, involving some gross violation of all principle, and which would be disastrous...
