It is also provided that a fixed sum shall be paid to the insured in case of loss of sight, hands, or feet. In the case of other injuries resulting from accidents the amount paid to the insured is dependent upon the extent of the damage sustained. Provision is frequently made whereby the insured becomes entitled to a certain regular allowance in case of total disability to work. The usual accident policy contains a clause providing that no claim shall be valid where death or injury may have happened in consequence of voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger or perilous adventure. The certificate...
