A story that chronicles the life of Harlem teenager Joee during the periods 1969-1983. After a year and a half stay in a millionaire gated mansion community in Seattle Washington, where he lived with his Aunt and his Uncle who was a butler for the rich white family they lived with. The whole year and a half stay all 12 year old Joey could think of was the Harlem streets Avenues family and many friends he left behind. His Mom a factory worker who only works to cover up her husband s street activity s. His Dad a professional conman numbers man and loan shark highly respected in the streets of Harlem since the early 1940s and friend of Harlem legendary gangster Bumpy Johnson. Who escorted Joey on his first plane ride in 1964 from NY to DC. Joe returns home from Seattle. Be it ever so humble there s no place like Harlem. It never occurs to him he s changed since he s been gone, no more slang he now speaks with almost perfect diction. Once getting back to Harlem his old buddies find it amusing and funny that Joee has changed while he was away, it s even funnier when Joe recites the Gettysburg address and Declaration of Independence from start finish. Joee s proper ways will only last a month or so before he ain t speakin so proper no more, and with help from his friends learn how to steal smoke and hustle. He falls in love with his first girlfriend, trying to save her life from drugs the junkies he learns of drugs...
