

Rural Development in Mizoram: A Study of Irdp

By Kalpana Das

Mittal Publications, New Delhi, 2004. N.A. Book Condition: New. 23 cms. xviii, 177 p, Development of rural areas and population has been one of the most crucial policy issues in India since Independence. India has opted for multiple approaches to rural development keeping in view the multivariate needs of the people living here. During these 50 years of development planning, our rural development strategy has shifted from the growth - oriented to the target group - oriented and from target group ?oriented to employment - oriented and welfare - oriented. However over a period of last 50 years of rural development experience it has been noted by a number of scholars as well as social activists that such a model of rural development has been almost a failure. The rural poor have not experienced any significant change in their living conditions rather the number of rural poor has grown and their conditions worsened. Integrated Rural Development programme (IRDP) a major self - employment generating programme was launched in 1980, to provide income generating assets and self employment opportunities to rural families who live below the poverty - line (BPL). But the perusal of this programme reveals that this programme could not deliver...
