Anderson, of Missouri, on the Principles and Policy of the Black Republican Party and the Duty of Whigs and Americans in the Approaching State and Presidential Elections: Delivered in the House of Representatives, February 16, 1860* Sir, at that eventful period when the Constitution was adopted by the fathers of the Republic, and accepted by the sovereign States of the Union, Slavery negro slavery - was an existing institution in twelve of the thirteen States of the Confederacy. A large majority of the members that composed the convention and originated and formed that federative compact, were the absolute owners of slaves. It was a domestic institution that had been introduced and established by the Puritan fathers, and perpetuated and fostered by their descendants. It was regarded, at the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution, as one of the institutions of the country, to be preserved and protected by that sacred instrument. From that day to this, it has received the sanction, and protection of the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the Federal Government. It was an institution in regard to which, all of the States, possessed the power, in the exercise of their individual sovereignty, to dispose of whenever the people, in their wisdom, might deem it proper and expedient so to do. We know that the climate and productions of the North rendered slave labor unprofitable, and that it was the instinctive principle of gain, the philanthropy of dollars and cents, by which they were impelled to rid themselves of what they now, with pretentious piety, call the sin of slavery, the sum of all villainies. They effected...
