He is more engaged in weighing longs and shorts than in contemplrting the charms of the lady; and where he should be observing her smiles, he is only looking for an appropriate spondee. Take the following specimen of his love-songs; it is one of the best of the set: --Si fatale fuit mihi Ut morerer ante mortem j Cur fatale non item fuit, Ut viverem ante vitam? Sed si non valet hoc fato Fieri, ut ante vitam vivam: Fortasse fiet, et erit Post vivere mortem. They are all in this style. Scaliger prided himself on his classic taste LVIII. I am in love with Mary Queen of Scots She is the Morning Star of History. So exquisite was her beauty, that once, carrying the pyx in the procession of the host, at Paris, a woman, struck by the enchantments of her figure and features, burst through the surrounding crowd anxious to touch her garment, to convince herself that she was not an angel from the skies. It is related of Hume, that when last in France, the principal of the Scots College placed in his hands some manuscripts in the handwriting of Mary, and at the same instant asked him why he had affected to write her character without having previously consulted these memorials? Hume made no reply; but taking up the papers through curiosity...
