Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: .to the careful investigation of the more observing and scientific of our growers, so that the work of fertilizing our citrus orchards may be reduced to a science so plain, simple, and practical that any of us may comprehend it, and that the results will be such that an all-assuring faith in its principles may prevail. I am pleased to note that the Agricultural Department of our State University, as well as those interested in the manufacture of fertilizers, have made and are making a careful study of the subject, and have done much in disseminating general knowledge of the question and in educating the public. Those who give the matter candid and honest thought should be commended, and while they may be primarily promoted by selfish motives in the way of financial gain, yet if they devote any special ability they may possess to a more perfect comprehension of the question they should be regarded as public benefactors. FERTILIZING CITRUS TREES. Some four or five years ago I commenced hauling stable manure on the orchard, and on the information of good authority, that the trees would not need fertilizing probably for some years, and that when they did it would be nitrogen, I bought and applied in the fall Chile saltpeter, a small amount per tree, with the evident result that I had more puffy fruit than I ever had before up to that date. I say evident result, as the orange-growers who used it...
