

Beijing for Beginners: An Irishman in the People's Republic (Paperback)

By Gary Finnegan

The Liffey Press, Ireland, 2008. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. I hand over my entrance form to a young but tough-looking official. First time in China? Yes. Push green button. The front of the desk has four buttons lighting up. Two green, two red. The first green one says very satisfied and has a picture of a very happy face. The second says satisfied with a slightly less ecstatic, but still moderately content smiley face. The third button is red. It reads not satisfied and the face looks somewhat downbeat. The last option is a miserable-looking very dissatisfied . Above the range of smileys is a question: How satisfied are you with the welcome you received in Beijing? Eh. I'll be teaching at a. Push green button! I push the green button, the one with the smiliest face of all. And that's that. I'm in. No doubt there'll be a news story at the end of the year claiming 99 per cent of tourists are delighted with the reception they get in China. There is no fifth option saying airport is nice, but do something about the spitting. . Faced with choking smog,...
