Brighton Publishing LLC, United States, 2014. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Take a view into the raw living that occurs in households across the planet as it is displayed in this fictionalized personal memoir of an abuse survivor who is determined to collect the data required to sort out reality, survive, and most importantly, tread the narrow path of life that forces you to choose between following the blueprint set before you, or to draw a new one. Ramona Pedron tells this gripping true story of life under the horrific reign of an abusive, tyrannical mother. As a very young child, Monica is handed over to an aunt and uncle, whom she calls her mother and father. She is happy with them and content in her life, until at the age of seven she is returned to her real mother and stepfather. Monica and her younger sister, Carmen, and her older brother, Tony, are subjected to their mother's daily tirades and their stepfather's willing silence as they grow up in an acutely dysfunctional family. Monica's mother isn't just a control freak-she is determined that whatever her children ask for, long for, or desire, she will give them the opposite. Her punishments for the slightest infraction are extreme. Suspecting Monica has done something against her wishes, she slashes and smashes Monica's possessions, including her private journal and all of her clothing. Humiliation is her weapon of choice, and she wields it at the slightest provocation. Things aren't any better for Monica at school, where she is troubled-and failing-both socially and academically. By the time she reaches junior high, she is voted dog of the school by the beautiful and popular students. She escapes into a world...
