Createspace. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 104 pages. Dimensions: 10.0in. x 8.0in. x 0.2in. La clasificacin de las tcnicas de segmentacin de mercados distingue entre tcnicas predictivas, en las que las variables que intervienen en el proceso pueden clasificarse inicialmente en dependientes e independientes (similares a las tcnicas del anlisis de la dependencia o mtodos explicativos del anlisis multivariante) y tcnicas descriptivas, en las que todas las variables tienen inicialmente el mismo estatus (similares a las tcnicas del anlisis de la interdependencia o mtodos descriptivos del anlisis multivariante). Las tcnicas predictivas de segmentacin especifican el modelo para los datos en base a un conocimiento terico previo. El modelo supuesto para los datos debe contrastarse despus del proceso de minera de datos antes de aceptarlo como vlido. En algunos casos, el modelo se obtiene como mezcla del conocimiento obtenido antes y despus de la segmentacin y tambin debe contrastarse antes de aceptarse como vlido. Por ejemplo, las redes neuronales permiten descubrir modelos complejos y afinarlos a medida que progresa la exploracin de los datos. Gracias a su capacidad de aprendizaje, permiten descubrir relaciones complejas entre variables sin ninguna intervencin externa. Podemos incluir entre estas tcnicas todas las tcnicas de segmentacin en las que subyace un modelo (modelos de eleccin discreta, anlisis discriminante, rboles de decisin, redes neuronales, anlisis conjunto, etc.) Estas tcnicas tambin se denominan tcnicas de clasificacin ya que permiten extraer perfiles de comportamiento o clases, siendo el objetivo construir un modelo que permita clasificar cualquier nuevo dato en una de las clases. En las tcnicas descriptivas no se asigna ningn papel predeterminado a las variables. No se supone la existencia de variables dependientes ni independientes y tampoco se supone la existencia de un modelo previo para los datos. Los modelos se crean automticamente partiendo del...
